Special Needs CAPS Online Homeschool

Saving Grace Special Needs Homeschool is grounded in our belief in Inclusive Education and that no child should be left behind and that is why we have developed a Special Needs Curriculum to cater for students with Special Educational Needs.

There are so many parents and students around the world who have tried various curriculums that is just not suited for their child's SPECIFIC academic needs which is why our number 1 priority was to develop a Special Needs Curriculum that is not only suited for your child but that is also enjoyable.

Our goal is to equip all children for the real world by providing them with the academic and basic skills needed to be functional adults.

Every child is special, from their individual freckles right down to the size of their pinky toes!

But some children have needs that are considered “extra” special — outside the scope of the ordinary. If your child fits into this category, then you understand that they are learners with special needs, as well.

If your child is not coping in main stream this is probably due to one of 2 things: The CAPS Curriculum may not be suited for them or perhaps it could be the fast pace of traditional schooling that is putting pressure and affecting them negatively.

If you are exploring the option of Online Homeschool for your child with special educational needs then you are at the right place. If your child has been stuck on the CAPS or any other curriculum for years with little to no progress then it's time to make a change that will benefit you and your child.

Our Special Needs Online Homeschool offers parents two homeschool curriculum options

Special Needs Curriculum

Grade R-9 available in English and Afrikaans

Special Needs Curriculum (Adjusted CAPS)

Grade R-9 available in English and Afrikaans.
Students can do this over 12 or 18 months

Education of Children with Special Needs

- ▶ Homeschooling a Child with Asperger's Syndrome

- ▶ Homeschooling a Child with Pervasive Developmental Disorder (PDD)

- ▶ Homeschooling a Child with Down Syndrome

- ▶ Homeschooling a Child with ADHD

- ▶ Homeschooling a Child with Dyslexia

- ▶ Homeschooling a Child with Auditory Processing Disorder

- ▶ Children with ADHD, often require shorter lessons and untimed tests.

- ▶ Children with Down syndrome may need accommodations for reading, writing, and testing.

- ▶ Dyslexic students often benefit from visual aids, assistive technology, and books on tape.

Homeschooling can be incredibly beneficial for many special needs children.

Parents who have been battling the school system for a curriculum adaptation for special needs or the ability to dictate their answers to a scribe often feel like their time could be better spent. They may start to ask themselves, "Can I homeschool my special needs child?" The answer, of course, is a resounding, "Yes!"

Saving Grace Special Needs Homeschool as made this possible with our specially created Special Needs Curriculum.

Homeschool Curriculum for Special Needs Students

Fortunately, homeschooling parents don't need an advanced degree in special education to effectively teach their children. Our curriculum is specifically tailored to support children with special needs. When choosing a special needs curriculum for homeschooling, it's essential to ensure that it:

Proceeds at the students own pace.

Builds on existing reading, writing and math skills.

Allows placement and progress for each child at independent levels for math and language arts.

Encourages kids to become active learners through exploration and discovery.

Introduces new learning opportunities in a safe, supportive environment.

Balances learning with fun!

Our interactive multimedia lessons is perfect for children with short attention spans, autism, processing disorders, dyslexia, and other learning disabilities.
